Airports

There are three airports in the Washington DC area that participants can use as the final flight stop:

Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport (DCA)

DCA is located just 6 miles south of the ATIGS venue. The airport has its own Metrorail station with direct service to downtown D.C.

Washington Dulles International Airport (IAD)

IAD sits about 25 miles west of D.C. and is a major hub for international arrivals and departures. The airport is accessible by Metro bus, Metrorail and Washington Flyer coach service.

Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport (BWI)

BWI lies about 30 miles north of D.C. Amtrak and MARC (Maryland Area Rail Commuter) trains offer easy connections to the airport. The BWI Express Metro bus runs between BWI and the Greenbelt Metrorail station approximately every 40 minutes. Passengers flying into Dulles (in Virginia) or Baltimore (in Maryland) can get to and from DC via cab, shuttle, Lyft, Uber or rental car.

Ronald Reagan National Airport is also serviced by Metrorail on the blue and yellow lines.
